

Gillespie Named To Law Journal

Hatfield, Lassiter Get Managing Editorships

John Richard Gillespie was appointed editor of the Kentucky Law Journal, succeeding co-editors Frank Warnock and John Hopkins. Prof. Roy Moreland, faculty adviser, announced.

Gillespie, third year law student from Franklin, will take office at the beginning of the fall semester. George W. Hatfield, Whitley City, and James M. Lassiter, Murray, were chosen managing editors for the journal and succeed Harry B. Miller, who will remain managing editor until his graduation in August.

Six men were appointed to the Journal editorial board: Clarence Crech, Ashland; John J. Larkin, Lexington; Calvert C. Little, London; D. L. McLaughlin, Lexington; Marne Q. Miller, Portsmouth, Ohio, and Robert E. Park, Trenton, Tenn. These appointments were made to fill vacancies left by Bernard A. Wells, Catherine Gills, Miller, Warnock and Hopkins, all of whom will have graduated by September.

Other members of the editorial board at present are John J. Johnson, Fred H. Daugherty, Porter H. Gilbert, Norris Reigler, and William F. Threlkeld.

Basis For Appointment

Appointment to the Law Journal staff is based on scholarship and the ability to do creditable professional writing, Prof. Moreland said. The Journal is published four times a year, in November, January, March, and May.

It has a mailing list composed mostly of practicing attorneys in Kentucky, law school libraries, and other persons and institutions with a professional interest in such publications.

Protests Voiced On Entrance Setup At Medical School

Following a claim by a University of Louisville official that students are getting into the Medical School through political pressure, some UK pre-medical applicants to the school raised an outcry against what they called "discrimination."

But UK authorities gave an official viewpoint taking an opposite stand.

"I'm not aware of any discrimination going on," said President H. L. Donovan, "and I don't believe there is any."

"The admission of students to medical school at the University of Louisville is a problem for the University of Louisville, not the University of Kentucky," the president said.

"Their Business"

"We would not think of indicating to them in any way how they should go about the admission of students. That's their business."

University pre-med students had various opinions, some varying with the official one and some not.

"My application to the University of Louisville has been put in for two straight years," said one. "The first year I heard not a word from them. This year I've heard nothing from them. They just ignore UK applicants."

Another student said that only ten applicants from the University have been accepted this year. "That's a pretty pathetic number of boys going from the biggest and best pre-med school in the state to the only medical school in the state."

Dr. R. S. Allen, advisor for pre-medical students and head of the anatomy and physiology department, denied that he had made any charges against the Louisville school.

Would Make Good Anywhere

He said that UK graduates who have been recommended by the pre-medical screening committee would make good in any medical school. At latest report, Dr. Allen said, "there has not been a single failure of a committee-recommended student since the committee's formation in 1939."

One pre-med senior said, "I'm left with no alternative but to think there's discrimination against students, especially UK students, without political pull. I've seen some of the men who have gotten in that way."

The situation came up when Dr. S. I. Kornhauser, executive secretary of the University of Louisville Medical School, said UL was admitting students, scholastically undesirable "because they knew the right people."

Dr. John Walker Moore, dean of the Medical School, yesterday denied Dr. Kornhauser's statement.

Dr. Kornhauser said political pressure had become apparent after a state legislature passed a bill giving UL $125,000 for research.

Gov. Clement's new State Medical Research Commission has authority to recommend 12 students for research scholarships. They automatically enter the Louisville medical school "because they knew the right people."

Dr. Allen Fills Zoology Vacancy

Dr. William R. Allen, U.K. professor of zoology was made head of the Department of Zoology at a Board of Trustees meeting Friday.

Dr. Allen, a member of the University staff since 1922 succeeds the late Dr. W. D. Funkhouser.

A native of Ossian, Ind., Dr. Allen received the bachelor of arts, master of arts, doctor of philosophy degrees from Indiana University. Before joining the U.K. faculty he had taught zoology at Kansas State College, Indiana University, and Akron University. For five years he was principal and teacher in the elementary schools of Hartford City, Ind.

Prof. Allen has been a member of expeditions to Peru, Chile, and Bolivia. He is co-author of "Fishes of Western South America" and has written numerous books and articles on zoology.

Dr. Allen is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, the American Society of Zoologists, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and other scientific societies.

At the University he has taught elementary zoology, comparative anatomy, ornithology, ichthyology, ecology, and entomology.

Dr. Funkhouser, dean of the Graduate School and head of the Department of Zoology, died June 9. Prof. Allen's appointment was effective July 1.

Fence Being Erected For Maxwell Place

Students of the Department of Mines and Metallurgy are making a steel fence to be erected around the president's home.

The fence will extend from Rose Street, past the president's home near the new Fine Arts building, and past the east side of the library, up to the front of the house.

The metallurgy department has employed students for the work which is being done on the campus, according to Prof. C. S. Crouse of the metallurgy department.

Vets May Sign Forms

Any Public Law 346 veteran, either in summer school or not, may fill in forms for fall registration any time between next Monday, and Monday, August 30, in Room 204, Administration Building.

Veterans planning to be in school in the fall will save a delay in picking up their veterans' cards at registration by filling in the forms now, the Veterans Administration said.

Those who wait until the opening of the fall semester will have to fill in the forms on registration day before obtaining their veterans' cards.

Dutch Students Sample American Student Life

By Stanley J. Schill Feature Editor

Two Dutch students from the University of Leiden (contrary to popular opinion it is not spelled Leyden) are visiting the campus this week to get an idea about how American students live.

John Peerebloom, a student of history, and D. J. M. Van der Hoop, a pre-med student, are the representatives. Their job is to cement Kentucky-Holland relationships, under the sponsorship of the International Section of the Students for Democratic Action.

The remainder of their trip throughout the country will be sponsored by the National Student Association, whose congress they will attend during the last week in Lexington before returning home.

The boys arrived in Quebec on Holland on June 29 on one of two ships employed by the Dutch government for the exchange of students on just such missions as this.

Helvise Glessner, who will get her master's degree in August, was awarded a National Institute of Health Predoctorate Research Fellowship to study for her doctor's degree with Dr. J. C. Humphries, UK associate professor of bacteriology.

The fellowship, given by the U.S. Public Health Service, allots $1600 a year, plus tuition, to Miss Glessner.

Iring Leiberman, who also will get a master's degree in August, was appointed assistant professor of bacteriology at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

A fellowship for study toward a doctor's degree at the University of Pennsylvania, was awarded Angelina Fabrizio, who received her master's degree last June.

Nurse Joins Staff

Miss Pauline Morton, Lexington, has joined the staff of the University Health Service as a nurse.

Miss Morton was graduated in June from the Nazareth School of Nursing, Lexington.

Cookbook Sales Increase Funds For Scholarship

Most of the 2000 cookbooks, published by the University Women's Club to build up the Frances Jewell McVey Scholarship fund, have been sold.

All money from the sales, above expenses, will go to the fund, which provides scholarships for women students who qualify.

About 1600 of the books, called "Stay For Tea," were sold during the formal sales, according to Mrs. D. E. South, president of the women's club.

Orders for the cookbook, which sells for $2.50 plus 25 cents postage, are now being taken locally. Mrs. South said. Orders may be placed with Mrs. South since slow deliveries have caused the club to take the books off formal sale.

"Stay For Tea" contains many of the favorite recipes of the late Mrs. McVey, former dean of women and wife of president emeritus Frank L. McVey.

Most of the members of the University Women's Club contributed their own favorite recipes. Mrs. South said. She praised the "enthusiastic response" to the book's sale.

The amount to go to the scholarship fund cannot now be estimated, but Mrs. South believes it has "surpassed expectations."

Mrs. Walter Allen Price was chairman of the publication committee. The idea originated while Mrs. M. M. White was president of the club in 1945, Mrs. South said.

Lectures Scheduled By Dutch Professor

Dr. A. N. J. den Hollander of the University of Amsterdam will speak on "The Poor Whites: A Legend of the American South," at 8 p.m. Thursday in Memorial Hall.

Continuing the series of lectures sponsored by the political science department, Dr. Hollander will speak at 8 p.m. the next night in Memorial Hall on "Hungary Today: Behind the Iron Curtain."

Wednesday night's lecture, the fourth in the series, was on the topic "Is Marking Going to Starve?" Dr. Joseph Schwendeman of the geography department and Dr. H. Bruce Price of the agriculture college discussed the subject.

Ferguson To Attend University Of Geneva

Crawford Ferguson, journalism senior from Charlotte, N. C., will study French literature, language, and culture, at the University of Geneva in Switzerland next year.

Ferguson, who will be graduated in August, will attend the European school under the provisions of the GI Bill of Rights.

UK Group Entertains

Seniors in the Home Management House, under the direction of Miss Helen Wilmore, will entertain with a dessert party Thursday. They will attend the Guignol plays afterwards.

'Heat From The Earth' Is Aim Of Engineering Experiment

A device for pumping heat from the earth and into hot water will begin operation in October in the mechanical engineering laboratory, according to Prof. E. B. Penrod, head of the department.

The objectives of the experiment are to see if the earth is a suitable source of heat for the pump when used to heat small homes, and to make a careful study of transient heat flow through the ground.

Prof. Penrod pointed out that while electricity performs most of the services in the modern house, heating by electricity is generally too expensive.

More Heat Obtained
It has been found practical, however, to use the atmosphere, the earth, waste heat, a river, lake, or even well water as a source of heat for the home. Using an electrically driven pump, three or four times as much heat may be obtained as compared with direct electric heating, he said.

Ground coils are now being laid for the pump, and final preparations are to be completed soon after the start of the fall semester. Approximately 500 feet of tubing will be laid five feet underground for the pump, and will extend 100 feet west of Anderson Hall.

Great Interest

Such great interest has been taken in Prof. Penrod's work that a bulletin published recently by the Engineering Experiment Station

Preparations Being Completed For First Play In New Theater

Graduating Veterans Must Sign Fee List

All veterans in the University who plan to graduate this August must sign the list in the Veterans' Office, Room 204, Administration Building, in order for the government to pay for their nine dollar graduation fee.

Light, Gay Comedy

The production, according to Mr. Briggs, is "light, gay, comedy that should provide good summer theater fare."

Tickets are on sale for 60 cents for UK students, but identification such as a registrar's receipt must be presented or students will have to pay the regular $1 adult admission price, the director said.

The box-office, which opened at noon Wednesday, will be open from noon to 5 p.m. every day this week and from noon to 9 p.m. all next week.

Mr. Briggs urged all students to call early for reservations, and said that because of the small seating capacity of the temporary playhouse, "it will be practically impossible to get seats on the day you call."

Reservations will be cancelled at 6 p.m. the evening of the show for which they are made, unless tickets are picked up or paid for before that time.

Lead Roles

One of the lead parts, that of John Laurence, will be played by University graduate student, Conrad Richardson.

He has appeared in several other Guignol presentations, including "Joan of Lorraine," "Kiss and Tell," "Junior Miss," and others.

Three UK summer school students in the cast are making their Guignol debuts. They are Joe Dress, in the role of Fred Taylor, Tom Neet, who plays George Bechwood, and Tom Perkins, as L. Victor O'Leary.

Allan Watson, who plays the part of Oscar Dugan, is a summer term student who has been in one other play, "Joan of Lorraine."

The role of Mrs. Phyllis McKinley is played by Maxine Perrine of the University library staff.

Production Staff
Summer school students on the production staff are Elizabeth Groggin, assistant director; Davis Lowrey, prompter; Alma Clarkson, call girl; Bill O'Bannon, stage manager; C. B. Jones, an assistant; Jim Steiner, electrician; John Marlowe, house manager; and Virginia Juet, musical director.

The last Guignol play appeared in May, 1947. After the old playhouse was destroyed by fire in February, 1947, the little theater group tried only two productions in the University High School auditorium before giving up the plan as too difficult without a permanent location.

The plays "Joan of Lorraine," "Mama," and "Joan of Lorraine," "John Loves Mary" is the first play attempted in the temporary structure on Rose Street. When the Fine Arts Building is finished, the little theater will move in there permanently.

Mr. Adair has taken a job with the Hagenon Properties Inc. as assistant general manager.

Owen graduated from the engineering college in June, and will take graduate work in September.

The sisters, from Warsaw, Ky., visited the sheep exhibits in the Royal Sheep Show in England, and will go to other countries from there.

Both girls have been outstanding in showing sheep in campus livestock shows. Jean is a former SGA representative and both have been YWCA officers.

"Yes, I believe it is the valves."

"She was raised on condensed milk."

Unfortunately for you who accidentally turned to this page and let that flashy headline catch your eye, we have started something new on the campus—new, at least, for us. All complaints should be directed to Ray Fulton, Kernel managing editor, whose brainstorm this title was. It originated at a midnight oil-burning session deep in the catacombs of McVey Hall. Just at the foot of the Kernel's own "spiral staircase."

Exchange Of Foreign Students

The two Dutch students visiting our campus this week are living examples of the value of the exchange of students between all countries of the world.

The chief reason for the present international tension is the fact that people of different nations are ignorant of each other's points of view and are therefore suspicious of and antagonistic toward one another.

The best method of doing away with this unnecessary evil is through the education of the youth of all nations. In what better manner can this be accomplished than through the exchange of students?

Understanding and learning of your fellow man does not come from books alone but also through personal contacts between individuals who come from different countries and from different environments.

It is the National Student Association which is sponsoring the trip throughout the United States for these two foreign students.

It is our opinion that NSA is a forward-looking organization and that it would be a step forward for the students of the University of Kentucky if they would, through their SGA representatives, join the National Student Association when the matter comes up to be voted upon this fall.

Editor, the Kernel:

Sir:

Have you noticed it?

A most alarming situation prevails on our campus.

Most summer school students are supposed to be in school for a serious purpose. They are supposed to be mature adults seeking to finish their education and go forth properly equipped to make an adequate living as useful, thoughtful members of a community.

But do these students spend their spare hours in the library, as one would logically conclude?

If you think so, Mr. Editor, you have been deceived.

The answer? Beer.

Why an otherwise normal young man or woman would, on a hot, sticky afternoon, choose to drink fermented malt which will in the long run raise their temperatures even more, is incomprehensible to me.

But I am a student myself, and a broadminded one.

My acquaintances who partake of such beverages sometimes make derivative remarks in re my attitude, which is, after all, the only attitude a civilized, thinking, Christian person could take.

But the other day a young man in my rooming house passed me carrying a quart bottle, at least a quart.

He told me it was kerosene for his coal oil lamp.

I got to thinking it over and I believe he was lying.

Believe me such a situation is serious. The Kernel, as a campus newspaper, should take steps.

You probably did not realize what is going on, and I hope I have opened your eyes.

Awake! Look about you. And by all means, take steps.

The ministers who opposed the one o'clock closing hours for bars were quite right. I believe, and I believe that most of the students believe, that alcohol should be banned now and for always.

The Spice Of Life

By Ruby Graham

The University of Kentucky has gone to the horses—at least it seemed that way last week. Some campus horse-lovers couldn't even leave the track long enough to hear Elliott Lawrence at Joyland Thursday night.

Couples seen at the Horse Show during the week include: Buzz Short and Ainslie Embrey; Frank Gilliam and Sue Allen; Bill McCann and Doty Eth; Billy Hayes and Riggley Park; Don Ross and Betty Ann Shropshire.

Twosomes at the Elliott Lawrence dance were Jack Gutermuth and Joanne Marsh; Jim Stiles and Jeanne Wilson; Mont Givens and Carmaine Brown; Fred Howard and Nilda Latta; Russell Travis and Aline Gaines; Jack Park and Barbara Mami; Ed Jackson and Marilyn Morris; Kent Floyd and Ann Tucker; Dave Cheek and Mary Jane Agnew.

Bill Gutermuth has returned from engineering camp. Maybe Suzanne Hannahs won't have to sit in now.

Dick Youngerman, who is residing with the Rebels for the summer, is back after a weekend off for pleasure. The reason for excitement is a dance in Louisville.

Norma Jean Smith is making wedding plans for September. Roy E. Stone is the man in the picture.

Tommy Mattingly made a flying stop at the Sigma Nu House early this week. Matt dropped by to show the boys his new convertible—how many does this make?

Bud Duran is all smiles since Joan Hendricks is back from vacation.

Bob Guffy has returned to look over the beauty of the campus pending his arrival back in the fall as a junior for the third time.

Another AGR is pinned—but the gal doesn't want it told yet. On the subject of pins, Mike Mills gives permissions, not pins.

Constant twosome: Paul Sears and Juanita Crawford.

Why does Jim Basham go to Frankfort every weekend?

The Sig Eps expect to see Doug Ey around the house more often since Kathryn Webb is in camp.

Buzzy Short enjoyed a snappy meal interrupted by a phone call Tuesday afternoon.

Bob Carter couldn't make it to classes Saturday morning. We're not on a five-day week any more, Bob.

What fraternity man (with plenty of nerve) is currently dating the two Mayer sisters?

Tilly McCarty was the subject of a midnight assault recently.

Marian Wright has been busy since Wayland Givens hit town for a visit.

Bill McShane is reported to be having blonde trouble.

At the Frankfort Bachelor's Ball were Dick Tygett and Jerry Neuhart; Senny Connell and Lucy Bechmer; Gordon Mills and Patsy

Job Simpson, a towering mountaineer, was hailed into court on an assault charge. The State produced the weapons that the defendant had allegedly used in the attack—a two-by-four, a pair of sheep shears, a pitchfork, and a cross cut saw. But the defense countered by displaying the implements Job's adversary was said to have used in reprisal—an axe, a shovel, a hoe, and a pair of tongs. The jury retired to ponder its verdict and returned shortly with the following remarkable statement: "Judge, we all can't agree on no verdict, but, by jingo, we'd all paid ten bucks to a seen the fight!"

Letters

Editor, the Kernel:

I wish to point out a slight error in your issue of last week.

A feature appeared in which was mentioned an individual by the name of Phyllis who is currently enamoured with a restless wretch, name of John.

I won't vouch for John. The name itself sounds like an alias and, judging by his behavior, it probably is.

Back to Phyllis. A virtuous member of the female species, regardless of her station in society, is entitled to some consideration. The request I make, sir, is only that you inform your audience following that Phyllis is really not Phyllis but Phoebe. Mistakes, sir, are natural and need only be corrected to be forgiven.

I speak not as one whose statements quibble, sir, but as one whose statements rest on the rock of authority. You see, sir, Phoebe is my sister-in-law.

HAIRY

Editor, the Kernel:

Dear Mr. Sorrelle:

Before I start this letter, I want to say that I am an older person, not a student, and that I have always been a friend of your campus newspaper.

I think it is very well done in some respects and I realize it takes a great deal of time and competence. Therefore I am not criticizing it unthinkingly.

My only objection to the Kernel is that it devotes just a bit too much space to inconsequential trivialities that really are not of a nature to be long-remembered.

Last week, for instance, is an example that I may cite. Although dogs, monkeys, and basketball are pleasant enough topics for idle conversation, they are scarcely serious enough subjects for the printed word.

A university newspaper is, or should be, educational and informative.

The University of Kentucky is doing some excellent research work. Perhaps some articles on this type work would be beneficial and a bit more lasting.

This is not a real criticism, mark you. It is simply a suggestion. I know you will take it in the sense that I intended it.

Sincerely,

A Friend of the Kernel

If Poll Pans Out, Dewey Will Be Next President

By O. B. Stanley

If a cross-section survey of students at the University means anything as far as the national elections go, Governor Dewey, the Republican nominee, for president will receive at least three times as many votes as President Truman when election day rolls around some few months hence.

Students were asked two specific questions. (1) Do you favor Dewey or Truman for president of the United States? (2) Do you favor Senator Cooper or the Democratic nominee for United States Senator from Kentucky?

This second question brought about a great deal of comment as to just who the Democrats will nominate in the primary next month.

The two leading contenders for the nomination are Congressman Virgil Chapman and John Young Brown. Oddly enough, these two men received the same number of votes.

These two together got just two more votes than Sen. Cooper polled in the straw vote. Many of the backers of Brown said that would vote for Cooper if Chapman were nominated and several Chapman backers said the same thing.

A true survey on this question would be hard to ascertain, because Cooper's opponent has not been decided.

Many of those polled offered comment on the situation. Some were disinterested and said they would complain no matter who is elected, while others said they would be satisfied with either candidate.

Most of the students were definite in their convictions and took a definite stand as to their opinion. Here are a few of the comments gained on a trip across the campus. An unbiased effort was made to get these statements from both Truman and Dewey backers.

Joe Lyle, A&S senior from Winchester: "From what I have heard of Cooper, I prefer him to Chapman or Brown." R. P. Hollingsworth, Commerce senior from Lexington: "The Republican ticket is just right for me."

This was opposed by W. R. Roberts, another Commerce senior from Lexington: "The Republican ticket should be reversed with Warren in the number one spot."

Tom Juett, graduate student in political science from Owensboro: "I would vote under the Democratic rooster no matter whose name was under it."

Carl Weber, Commerce senior from Frankfort: "I am a Democrat but Cooper is undoubtedly the best man."

William Presser, Engineering Junior from Burlington: "I am a Democrat but I'll have to vote for Dewey. Truman is a good man for a next-door neighbor but not for the presidency of the United States."

While no world-shaking consequences are expected from this poll, it may give some slight indication of student opinion.

More complete information may be had when the Campus League of Women Voters conducts its straw vote this fall.

A woman called up for jury duty refused to serve because she didn't believe in capital punishment.

Trying to persuade her, the judge explained, "This is merely a case where a wife is suing her husband because she gave him a thousand dollars to pay down on a fur coat and he lost the money in a poker game."

"I'll serve," she said, "I could be wrong about capital punishment."

Ted Osborn Named To Coaching Staff

Ted Osborn, veteran Akron, Ohio, high school mentor, has been named to a position on the University of Kentucky football staff. It was announced early this week by Athletic Director Bernie Shively.

He will replace Mike Balitsaris, a former Tennessee Vol end star, who recently resigned as Wildcat end coach to become a member of Vanderbilt's football staff.

Osborn, who graduated from Ohio Wesleyan in 1931 and starred as a varsity halfback for three seasons, has been head football coach at Central High in Akron for 12 years.

In 1933, Osborn returned to Ohio Wesleyan as an end coach after spending one season at Ohio State as freshman football coach.

From 1934 to 1935, Osborn was line coach at Akron University. During the war, he served as a lieutenant in the Navy.

He: My dear, extenuating circumstances perform me to preclude you from such a bauble of extravagance.

She: I don't get it.

He: That's what I just said.

U. S. Olympic Team Arrives In England; Bluegrass Tennis Meet Booked For August 2-7

By Dudley Saunders, Kernel Sports Editor

The Kentucky Wildcats and the Phillips Oilers renewed their basketball rivalry yesterday in Paisley, Scotland, where the NCAA and AAU champs clashed in the first of four pre-Olympic exhibition games in Scotland.

Today, they meet in St. Andrews, tomorrow at Perth, and Sunday at Edinburgh. On Monday they will join the rest of the United States squad in the Uxbridge housing project just outside London to await the beginning of the World Tournament on July 29.

Except for several hair-raising mix-ups with the English monetary system, the cagers from the New World have had smooth sailing ever since leaving New York. Several members came down with sore throats in mid-ocean, but reported recovery by the time the Golden Isles had been sighted.

In a mid-ocean press conference early this week, Bub Browning, head coach of the U. S. cage team named his own Phillips Oilers as the greatest basketball team in history and the Kentucky Wildcats the second greatest.

Greatest College Team In History
He went on to say, "Early in the season I thought in California Nils Price had the greatest college team in the country, but I was mistaken. Kentucky definitely has the smartest college team I have ever seen."

Browning, following in his colleague Adolph Rupp's footsteps, went on to predict greater things for basketball in America and in the world. He expects crowds of 20,000 and 25,000 in the year near future, and the 15,000 turn-out to witness the Kentucky-Phillips game at Stoll Field helped lend emphasis to his point. The youthful Oiler coach believes most of the basketball arenas being built today will be too small in a few years to accommodate the crowds.

U.S. Favored By Omitting Rule
In regard to the Olympic games, Browning stated that kicking the three second rule out of the meet will give his team a great advantage over the entire field. He has at least three men capable of standing under the basket and knocking incoming goals away from the hoops. Besides seven-foot Bob Kurland, he has 6'7" Alex Groza and 6'8" Don Baskdale, who can serve as goalie, should one of their opponents get too hot.

Browning says, however, that he will not use his tall cagers as goal-tenders unless it becomes absolutely necessary, because it would give the U.S. team such an outstanding advantage. He believes his team can win without taking advantage of their great height to "rob" their opponents of goals.

It is believed that Browning will divide the 14-man squad into two seven-man teams, just as they were in the Cat-Oiler series, and use them in alternate games. In the finals the entire squad will probably see action.

Pre-tournament ratings still favor the United States team by a comfortable margin, with Czechoslovakia gaining prestige as Europe's strongest hope.

Theory For Russia's Absence
During the crossing, several reasons were given for Russia's refusal to enter the Olympics, but the one offered by an American official has found the most followers.

His theory: "There's only one reason we can see for Russia's refusal to enter the games this year. Russia can't stand to lose. They're going to practice four more years and then try to bowl us over in every sport."

Continental observers say it isn't as funny as it sounds. Those who have seen the Russian basketball team and their track and field stars in action, and the great athletic building program under way in the land of the Volga, say the Russians would work their heads off if they thought there was even the slightest chance to win the 1952 Olympics, lock, stock and barrel.

Brundage Considered As Possible IOC Head

Avery Brundage president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has been prominently mentioned as a likely candidate for the office of chairman of the International Olympics Committee, it was learned Wednesday. Brundage announced on board the S.S. America that he would not stand for re-election as president of the U.S. committee.

J. Sigrid Edstrom, president of the International Olympics Committee, stated at St. Moritz, during the winter games that he would resign at the London meeting.

Brundage hinted that he would not turn down the chairmanship should it be offered him.

The United States Olympic team arrived in Southampton, England, early Wednesday morning and shortly afterwards boarded buses for their quarters in Uxbridge, near London.

The basketball team, however, left for Scotland for a four-game exhibition series, sponsored by the Olympic committee in an effort to build up interest in basketball in the Isles.

Only one member of the swimming team was reported in bad condition. The rest of the team had nothing to complain about other than stiff muscles and a few mildly sore throats.

In London, the team was greeted by the warmest weather that city has seen this year. Food was of good quality and in abundance and the housing units were reported in excellent condition.

Open Letter To Time Magazine..

Sir:

If I had a red ribbon on this typewriter, I could REALLY show you some indignation. As is, I want to blast a slur cast on the Kentucky Wildcat basketball team's good name.

In Time's July 12 issue, "... somebody threw a firecracker. Thinking it was the final gun, the Oilers walked off the floor. A Kentucky player playfully grabbed the ball and shot a basket. Then the regular gun sounded, ending the game... Ky. 70 - Oilers 69".

Oh now really.

No mention was made of the pre-4th blast that halted the regulation game twelve seconds before the gun, with Kentucky in possession of the ball and the score deadlocked.

Moreover the way the reported portion of the game occurred, according to the United and Associated Press correspondents and Wildcat Joe Holland, was, "Well towards the end of the second overtime period, the Oilers were ahead by a point so they started to freeze the ball. Vince Boryla slapped the ball from one of their hands and I picked it up and started for our basket. I was halfway there when the firecracker went off. My first impulse was to stop dead and slam the ball down, but I went on ahead and put in an easy layup shot. I don't know why."

Amid the uproar following the game, Bud Browning, coach of the great Phillips Oilers team, grabbed a microphone and shouted over the airwaves, "I thought before this game California had the best college team we'd played, but Kentucky proved to me tonight, they're the greatest college club I've ever seen."

The Wildcats clawed their way to the first collegiate victory over the All-American cluttered Phillips 66 team in the last two seasons.

The annual Blue Grass Tennis Tournament will be held this year from August 2 to 7, at the University's Downing Courts. Bill McCubbin, director of intramural athletics, announced last week that all entry blanks must be sent to the offices of the Physical Education Department by midnight, July 28.

McCubbin expects the largest number of entries this year ever to take part in the annual event. The tourney is sponsored by the Physical Education Department together with the Lexington Herald-Leader. More than eighty central Kentuckians took part in the affair last year and officials are hoping for more than one hundred participants this year.

Men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles, will be offered for the competitors in addition to a junior division for boys under the age of 18. The recent Lexington Open tourney fostered much interest in the Blue Grass contest, and all indications are that entrants will journey from many neighboring towns within the fifty mile limit of the tournament.

Dave Ragland emerged last year as the men's singles champ for the second straight year. He was crowned Blue Grass victor as a result of his final conquest of Wilson Evans. Evans will be back this year to attempt to carry the trophy to Berea. The doubles team of Sergius Leach and Buddy Boone took top honors in that division in 1947, and both of these strokers are listed as fighting contenders again this year.

Although he has not yet officially entered his name, Jackie Byrd who copped the Lexington Open men's singles championship, is expected to defend that title in the coming tourney. Byrd will undoubtedly be seeded number one in the tourney if he chooses to participate.

Bill McCubbin will be assisted in the seedings by Prof. Harold H. Downing, retired tennis coach at the University. Serving on the tennis committee in addition to Chairman Bill McCubbin will be the sports editors of the local papers.

An entrance fee of $1.50 for all singles and $2.00 for a doubles team will be charged to cover tournament expenses. Trophies have already been secured and they will be presented by Chairman McCubbin on Aug. 7, following the final matches.

Betty Rowland Loses In First Flight Finals

Betty Rowland, University of Kentucky freshman playing in the Southern Women's Amateur last week at Nashville, lost to Mrs. Robert Monsted of New Orleans on the 20th hole in the finals of the first flight.

Earlier, Miss Rowland had qualified for the championship flight with 93, but had lost her first round match to the Arkansas women's finalist, and was thus dropped into the first flight.

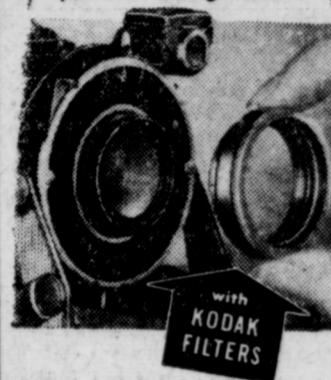

Playing in the first flight, the Idle Hour hopeful won three straight matches against some of the South's top women golfers before losing the flight championship in the extra hole final match.

Plaudits are in order for Henry Guidet, who did a fine job in managing his first tournament, the Lexington Open. With the help of Prof. Downing, Sergius Leach, Julia Ann Waters, and others, Henry staged one of the most successful, yet inexpensive tournaments held recently at the University. In addition to officiating duties during the tourney, Harry carried on his regular duties as court supervisor and conditioner.
